
PLANTAMURA PARCO LARGO

Region: Puglia, Italy

Appellation: Primitivo Gioia del Colle DOC

Grapes: 100% Primitivo

Farming: Certified organic

Age of vines: Vineyard planted in 2016, vines are coming from the massal selection

Altitude, Aspect, & Soil Type: 360 m, North and South facing, limestone and chalky soil rich in shell

Typical Harvest Time: First ten days of September

Maceration & Fermentation: Fermentation in stainless steel to preserve natural tannins, indigenous yeasts, fruit is de-stemmed, 10 day maceration

Agging: 6 months in stainless steel, 3 months in bottle

Production: 18,000 bottles annually

Notes from Oliver:

For my taste, the best, freshest Italian Primitivos come from a high part of Apulia with the lovely name 'Gioia del Colle,' or 'joy of the hill.' Plantamura is the work of Mariangela Plantamura and her husband Vincenzo. Vincenzo manages the vineyards, Mariangela the cellar. Their family has been growing Primitivo for more than a century, and they started bottling their own wines in 2002. They produce only Primitivo, in three different bottlings, differing mostly in the age of the vineyards; less than 4,000 cases are produced in total.

Fairly dark red-black; aroma of black plums, earth, baking spices, maybe a hint of coffee bean. On the palate, very flavorful and full-bodied, with abundant fruit, modest tannins, and good freshness despite the overall impression of ripeness. This would be perfect with pizza or any number of pasta dishes, and a good all-around red wine generally.