Notes from Oliver:

The Cavallotto family were one of the first small bottlers in the Barolo zone, starting in 1948. Their wines were made by traditional methods 50 years ago, and they are still today. Alfio, his brother Giuseppe, and their sister Laura are maintaining the quality set by their grandfather, father, and uncle, and also maintaining the long-standing practice of natural farming, in which they were a pioneer in their appellation.

San Giuseppe is the best parcel of Bricco Boschis. Definitely great Barolo, showing the classic fruit notes of wild strawberries and red-currants combined with hints of tobacco, sandalwood, licorice, and cinnamon. Beautifully balanced and glorious with rich pasta dishes and grilled meats.
